Evolve 6

Session 4

Making questions in future perfect

- 1. Start with the word "will."
- 2. Add the subject (the person or thing you're talking about).
- 3. Include the word "have."
- 4. Follow it with the past participle of the verb.

Will + subject + have + PP

Will you have studied all the English verb tenses by tomorrow?

Will Sarah have graduated?

Will he have gotten married?

Will it have gotten colder?

Will we have met your boyfriend?

Will they have left their jobs?

Making questions in future continuous

- 1. Start with the word "will."
- 2. Add the subject (the person or thing you're talking about).
- 3. Include the word "be."
- 4. Follow it with the (verb + "-ing").

Will + subject + be + (verb+ing)

What will you be doing today at 5 pm?

Where will John be going on his vacation?

When will your sister be leaving?

Who will you be entertaining at your home tonight?

Why will they be working late tonight?

How will she be going?

Transitional words

We can use transitional or linking words and phrases to connect two sentences to make our writings seem more fluent and smooth.

Here are some types of transitional words.

Addition: we use them to add more information to our writing and connect two sentences.

Examples: in addition, furthermore, moreover, besides, also.

Contrast: these can be used to highlight the difference between two ideas or things.

Examples: however, but, on the other hand, nevertheless, although,

Cause and effect: shows the relationship between a cause and its effect.

Examples: because, since, therefore, consequently, as a result,

summarizing: they're used to show the conclusion and overview. Examples: in summary, in a nutshell, to conclude, overall.

Homework

1. Write a text about some of the technologies of previous PDF and say how they'll be changing our lives in future and use transitional words as well.

2. Take a look at session 2 PDF file and find other part of speeches of the vocabulary.